START MEMO POST-OBJ:

Steve Rai is a 38 year old, highly motivated leader within the Vancouver Police Department (VPD) with excellent potential to move up in the ranks. During his tenure as a police officer, he has risen to the rank of sergeant while working not only as a street level officer but also as a recruiter, negotiator and liaison to the Indo-Canadian community. Sergeant Rai is one of the youngest sergeants in the Vancouver Police and has been identified by VPD management as a probable future senior manager. His willingness to understand U.S. culture and views and his potential to influence both cross-border policing and his community make him an outstanding candidate for the IV program.

Sergeant Rai is an ethnic Sikh Pungabi East Indian and is extensively involved with the 230,000 member Vancouver Indo-Canadian community where he acts as the VPD liaison. He has been involved in numerous high profile investigations of Indo-Canadian organized criminal groups who routinely target the U.S. with criminal attacks on U.S. financial payment systems and smuggling of illegal drugs. The Indo-Canadian community controls most of the British Columbia trucking industry that ships a huge amount of legitimate and illegitimate exports to/from the U.S. each day including vast amounts of B.C. grown marijuana and other contraband. Furthermore, Indo-Canadian gangs are responsible for high-dollar counterfeit debit and credit card attacks on U.S. financial institutions. The Indo-Canadian gangs involved in these organized criminal activities are highly volatile and have accounted for an inordinate amount of violent crime including more than 50 homicides in the past six years. Canadian and U.S. law enforcement and B.C. government officials have identified the illicit activities of Indo-Canadian gangs as a major criminal and social problem and expend considerable resources on investigating and preventing their criminal and violent actions which often have a major impact on the U.S. Sgt. Rai is an influential partner in these efforts.

Sgt. Rai not only uses his knowledge of Indo-Canadian culture and his skills as a Punjabi and Hindi speaker to investigate criminal activities in that community but he is also proactive in improving the relationship between Indo-Canadians and others. He devotes both professional and personal time to various community boards, safety committees and focus groups. He has a Bachelor of Arts degree in Asian Studies from the University of British Columbia and has continued to enhance his knowledge of Asian issues by traveling extensively to India and other Asian countries to further his education.

Sgt. Rai has a strong background as a police officer with not only routine patrol and management assignments but also specialized assignments as an emergency response team hostage negotiator, forensic interviewer, internal investigator and critical incident stress team responder, all of which make him an outstanding prospect for senior management. In his current role as the VPD recruitment officer, Sgt. Rai has sought to elevate the educational and ethical standards for VPD recruits and is interested in consulting with U.S. police as to their experiences and methods used to enhance professionalism of their departments.

In conclusion, Sgt. Rai is a valuable contact for the federal law enforcement agencies at the Vancouver U.S. Consulate and is on track to becoming a senior manager within the Vancouver Police Department. His sphere of influence includes not only VPD and their policies concerning cooperation with U.S. law enforcement on cross-border counter-terrorism, drug smuggling, financial crimes, human trafficking and other criminal investigations but also, as a leader in the Indo-Canadian community, includes influence within the second largest ethnic group in B.C. and their understanding of U.S. goals and policies. The IVP would benefit Sgt. Rai because although he has an exceptional amount of experience and education for a law enforcement official of his age, he has had very little exposure to the U.S. culture and policies. Sgt. Rai has never lived in the U.S. nor has he traveled there much. The IVP program would provide this exceptional young professional with an understanding of U.S. culture and views and serve as the cornerstone for the pursuit of common goals with him, his profession and his community.
